THE GRENADA SENTINEL.

VOLUME LXXVII — GRENADA, MISSISSIPPI, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1929. NUMBER 16.

MANY COOPERATING TO MAKE EDITION SUCCESS

An excellent spirit of cooperation on the part of Grenada's citizens and business and professional men is indicated in the expressions of endorsement which continue to reach the office of The Sentinel following the announcement of its forthcoming publication of The Fair & Progress Edition.

The expressed intention of The Sentinel to make this edition one of unusual features, to present them in a manner most attractive, is being accepted by many as a move toward constructive development. This, in fact, is the keynote of The Fair & Progress Edition.

The Sentinel intends to make this publication one of the greatest opportunities which the Grenada section of Mississippi ever has had to further community progress. To know his own community is the duty of every good citizen. Without such knowledge exploitation becomes a dangerous boomerang. It will be The Sentinel's purpose to present such facts, speaking with equal detail of industries and commercial ventures, religious and educational provisions, recreation, amusement and residential features, health and climatic conditions—all phases of life, in fact, which combine to make a successful and happy community.

With these facts before the reading public at home and abroad The Sentinel hopes to picture such an array of conditions existing in the Grenada territory as will portray opportunities which have passed heretofore unnoticed. That there are resources and facilities in Grenada, Grenada county, and its surrounding communities which will encourage an unending progression is without question. It remains to present these in their true light, without any semblance of over-boasting or exaggeration, and this The Sentinel will do to the best of its ability.

Within the past week reservations for space from many business and professional men of Grenada and surrounding points have come to The Sentinel. They come as substantial expressions of their willingness to support The Sentinel's program and to become an active part in its means of exploiting the community. Realizing the value of The Sentinel's objective, they have expressed a desire to do their part toward the progress of their city in a manner which contributes forcefully toward the success of the idea.

INSURANCE COMMITTEE SEEKS INFORMATION

The Insurance Research Committee of the House of Representatives of the Mississippi Legislature has issued an appeal to the newspapers of the state to aid them in securing information and suggestions from the insurance buying public of Mississippi.

Information bearing on this very important matter can be secured from the Insurance Departments of the forty-eight states as well as from the insurance companies but this largely represents the ideas of the companies themselves. It is the desire of the committee to secure from individuals and commercial organizations in the state their ideas and suggestions as to remedial insurance legislation.

The committee is composed of L. F. Hendrick, Jackson, Miss., chairman; J. B. Snider, Jr., Senatobia, Miss., secretary and A. A. Weille, Vicksburg, Miss.

Any citizen who cares to aid in securing better insurance laws for Mississippi or who has information or suggestions that he cares to make is invited to communicate with the committee. This may be done by letter or the committee will be delighted to arrange a hearing for interested parties at a time and place to be agreed upon.

That buyers of insurance in Mississippi are paying rates that are higher than those in any other state, with the possible exception of two, is admitted. Whether this high rate is the result of present laws and can be improved by the intelligent modification of these laws or whether the committee must work out some other plan will be determined by the information they are securing at this time.

The co-operation of the newspapers of the state, the service clubs and commercial bodies as well as that of the individual citizen is earnestly solicited by the committee.

LOCAL POST OF LEGION WILL SPONSOR CARNIVAL

Announcement is made in this issue of The Sentinel that the local post of the American Legion will hold a big carnival during the week beginning Oct. 28th. The location of the lot where the carnival will be staged is to be announced later.

The post has engaged the Reading United Shows, a strictly clean high-class organization, according to reports from other sections. No girl shows will be found on the midway and nothing but clean amusement for young and old is to be furnished.

The show is now playing a circuit of fairs in Tennessee and it is said to be one of the best carnivals on the road today. Fuller details will be announced in a later issue of The Sentinel.

"COLLEGE NIGHT" SUNDAY CLOSES UNION SERVICES

On next Sunday at 7:45 p. m., the congregations of the Methodist, Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches will unite at the First Presbyterian Church in a service which will be the most interesting held in Grenada in years. It will be a service of farewell to the boys and girls of the town who will enter and return to college at an early date. The entire service will be conducted by the college group, and the choir and special music will be by this group. Neither will the congregation hear the voice of any of the pastors, as the sermon and prayers will be given by these young men and women.

Mr. Jeff Cunningham, who is at present in college preparing for the ministry, will preach the sermon, and Landern Childress and Kenneth Tucker, both of whom will enter college this fall to prepare for the ministry, will make talks.

There are few towns throughout the nation that can boast of having so many young men of the town preparing and looking forward to the ministry, as has Grenada. And every person of Grenada should feel it a privilege as well as a duty to attend this service of honor to these boys, and to all our youth who are preparing for their life's calling.

HEBRON CHURCH HOST TO BAPTIST ASSOCIATION

The Grenada County Baptist Association met with Hebron Baptist church, 3 miles east of Grenada at 9:30 o'clock, Sept. 4th, in its tenth annual meeting.

Dr. W. E. Farr, pastor of the Grenada First Baptist Church, was re-elected moderator, R. E. Perry, clerk, and W. H. Martin, treasurer.

There are twelve churches in the association and all reported progress during the year.

Dr. R. B. Gunter, of Jackson, Mr. Auber Wilds, of Oxford, and Mr. W. E. Thompson, representing the Baptist orphanage, were present and made splendid speeches in their line of work.

Many said this was the best associational meeting ever held in Grenada county. The association will meet next year with Elliott church on Wednesday after the second Sunday in September.

THREE OF BIG FOUR SCORE GOV. BILBO

Say Governor's Charge House Wanted No Road Legislation Caused Because House Opposed His $82,000,000 Bond Issue—Sillers Says Bilbo's Message Shows His Desire to Rule or Ruin and Twits Executive about Dubbing Even His Friends Who Disagree with Him His "Creatures" and His "Jackasses"—George Answers Governor on Deficit of Whitfield Administration and Claims It Was But $624,555.03.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 1.—Statements were issued tonight by three members of the so-called "Big Four" of the house in reference to statements of Governor Bilbo in regard to highway legislation and the alleged $2,500,000 deficit following Murphree's administration.

L. C. Kennedy of Natchez, in speaking of the matter, said:

"The governor's message to the effect that he did not believe the big 4 of the house wanted any road legislation, of course, meant road legislation providing for an $82,000,000 bond issue to be expended by three men to be appointed by the governor, because the house has voted for most every kind of road bill, but the governor would not take any of them. I am glad the governor has apologized for his statement."

Walter Sillers of Rosedale, had the following to say:

"The governor's message is additional evidence of his insane desire to rule or ruin. His insolence is only surpassed by his audacity and egoism. His statement that the house adopted certain amendments to the road bill that did not meet fully his wishes sounds the death knell to road legislation this extraordinary session, can only be construed to mean that he assumes that a sufficient number of the senate and the house are but 'his creatures' to do his bidding as 'jackasses', to be walloped at his pleasure. The governor seems to forget that the legislature enacts laws and not the governor, that he can only recommend and veto, not dictate and that when he exceeds these bounds he is usurping legislative functions in violation of the spirit and letter of the constitution. His charge that the 'Big Four' does not want road legislation at this time is but a weak silly attempt to becloud the issue and is not supported by the record. He should have said the 'Big 84 won't take legislation at my dictation and therefore I brand anything they favor as undesirable'".

Representative Joe George of Greenwood, referring to Bilbo's statement concerning the $2,500,000 deficit following Murphree's administration said:

"It is no longer necessary to estimate what the deficit on Jan. 1, 1928 in the state's finances amounted to, for the time in which warrants could be drawn against appropriations expired June 30, 1928. The books in the auditor's office show that, including $100,000 and interest, borrowed by Governor Murphree for expenses incurred during the flood of 1927. the actual deficit was $624,555.03, less than 25 per cent of the minimum amount stated by the governor. Further comment is unnecessary."

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB MEETS THURSDAY AT JAKE'S PLACE

Brunswick stew, followed by barbecued chicken and a wealth of other good things to eat furnished the chief items for consideration by the Young Men's Business Club at its meeting Thursday noon. The meeting was held at Jake's Place, east of Grenada, a place now famous in this section for its menu. The next gathering of the club is to be held in the basement of the Methodist church on Thursday, Sept. 19.

The matter of the express company abandoning its uptown office and confining its business strictly to the depot was discussed pro and con and many arguments were advanced for and against the move. The president appointed O. L. Kimbrough, Jno. T. Keeton and L. C. Proby to investigate the matter thoroughly to determine what action the club would take.

Committees for the new quarter were named as follows: Attendance—F. S. York, Jay Gore, A. R. Dockery; Program—H. H. Heath, G. M. Lawrence and Dr. F. A. Stacy; Membership—O. L. Kimbrough, A. M. Juchheim and G. F. Deaton.

DR. HOCK HERE NEXT WEEK

Announcement is made that Dr. Emma Hock expects to return from her vacation early next week and that she and her most capable assistant, Miss Sue Hitt, will be in her office certainly by the middle of the week.

KEETON AND WIFE RETURN

Trip Complimentary to Mr. ton's Insurance Record.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Keeton Miss Anibel McAllister return the early part of the week from a ten day's trip made in conjuncti with a number of the most successful agents of the Lamar Li Insurance Co. This is the fourt time Mr. Keeton has been one o the leading insurance producers for his company, and it is indeed a high compliment to his energy, skill and ability as an insurance solicitor. In this day when an agent, as with almost every other calling or profession, has to fight his way to success and when there are so many insurance companies and insurance solicitors, it is a tribute to the tactfulness of an agent and to his business ability to be able to be one of the leaders for four different years. The itinerary carried the party, of which these Grenadians were members, to Chicago, Mackinaw Island, Michigan, into Ontario, thence to Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Niagara Falls and other places. It was a fine sight seeing trip.

These three had earned a deserved rest and The Sentinel feels sure that they got as much real pleasure out of the trip as any members of the party. Congratulations Mr. Keeton.

RUNDLE ADDRESSES ROTARY

At its meeting Tuesday at noon, the Grenada Rotary Club enjoyed a splendid address by Rotarian John Rundle, who spoke most interestingly on the "Philosophy of Rotary". The speaker gave a fine interpretation of what Rotary is and what it stands for and when he had concluded each one of his hearers had a clearer conception of what the organization means in a community.

Secretary C. H. Calhoon reviewed last year's attendance statistics and compared the record so far this year with the one previous.

The resignation of Paul Sisk, who has just moved to another city, was accepted and general regret was expressed over the fact that he had to terminate his membership. Attention was called to the fact that Mr. Sisk never missed a single meeting during the time he was a member of the club.

The club went on record as unanimously praising the action of John Borden, who has just finished erection of a cotton gin on Glenwild Plantation for his action in announcing that he would pay $40 per ton for cotton seed when other gins in this section have been paying eight and ten dollars less. Mr. Borden was a guest at the luncheon.

Dr. O. A. Shaw, head of the department of education at the University of Mississippi, was also a guest at the meeting.

DOCTOR SHARP HONORED AT BIRTHDAY DINNER

The writer, together with Drs. R. A. Clanton and C. K. Bailey and Mr. Harper Lake, was a guest at the delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. McElwrath on the evening of August 28, when a splendid dinner was served in honor of the 58th birthday of Dr. J. Sidney Sharp. The lovely daughter of the household, Miss Lena Elma, very graciously assisted her mother in doing the honors of the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. McElwrath know well the art of entertaining in a way to make their guests always feel so free and easy that they forget that they are attending any special function. All present were close and admiring friends of the one in whose honor the dinner was given, and they each entered heartily and joyously into making the hour more than a pleasant one to Dr. Sharp, a man who deservedly holds such a warm place in the hearts and the affections of such a great number in the community. A number had remembered Dr. Sharp with some useful presents as an evidence of their regard for him both professionally and as a man. The time sped by all too quickly and when the host and hostess were bade good night, all went away feeling more tender, and a more genuine and brotherly interest in their fellows. Dr. Sharp was felicitated on his birthday, and to say that the sincerest wishes were expressed that he might have many, many more birthdays, but faintly states the spirit that animated all who had the good fortune to be present on this delightful occasion.

Possibility Is There

At an auction in London only $25 was paid for the desk on which Charles Dickens wrote many of his stories. The young writers have no ambition. With that desk, and a bottle of ink, and plenty of paper, a man could write another "Pickwick Papers" if he was another Charles Dickens.

Extraordinary Legislative Session Adjourns and Passes into History

Last Hours of Session See Wright Road Bill Passed and Vetoed—Governor Vetoes Bill Whereby State Would Get Nearly Two Million Federal Funds for Roads—Bilbo Wanted Legislature to Recess until November to Consider Revenue Matters and Said Deficit Jan. 1 Would Be Nearly $4,000,000—Blames Socalled "Big Four" in House for Blocking Him—Last Minute Message Claims Audit Showed Over $50,000 Shortage in Records of Former Secretary of State, Power, Now Dead—Many About Capital Think Governor Has Put Himself in Hole.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 4.—Gov. Bilbo added another message to the many he has delivered to this extraordinary session of the legislature Monday. The Governor gave a brief review of what he had urged on the legislature and the result from his standpoint of the action of the lower house in not agreeing with him and putting through the measures he advocated. He gave more attention to road legislation than to any other one thing, and while he was more than unusually pacific and conciliatory in what he stated, he placed the blame for non-road legislation on the socalled "Big Four" in the lower house.

He argued that he did not think anybody would take seriously the argument offered by those who disagreed with him that it would be unconstitutional to legislate the present highway commission out of office, and reiterated his charge heretofore made that the present highway commissioners had been ruthlessly neglectful and that several of its members were in default in public monies. He reviewed his several offers of compromise, on road legislation, particularly his willingness to let the senate and the house pass on his nominations for highway commissioners and later his offer to submit a list of names of certain leading business men of the three supreme court districts from whom he would appoint highway commissioners if a bill were passed, and finally, he stated, he yielded his conviction that highway commissioners should be appointed and agreed to have them elected, three in number,—one from each supreme court district but to be voted on by the whole state. He characterized the last bill pending as a pernicious bill and stated most positively that he would not sign the bill if it were passed.

The Governor dwelt on finances briefly. He implored the lawmakers not to adjourn but to recess when they could come back and work out a revenue producing law, and unless this were done, he said, there would be a four million dollar deficit next January and the state's warrants would be "hawked about on the streets."

The Governor has announced that if a road bill is passed giving him the right to appoint the highway commissioners, he would name three outstanding business men of the state on the commission. He announced the names of those he had in mind; from north Mississippi he said he would name Mike Sturdivant. But the house leaders said a burnt child dreads the fire; that the Governor made a like promise at the 1928 legislative session when he was seeking to get an appropriation of $500,000 for tick eradication. They claim that he made certain promises as to appointments on the tick eradication board yet did not name a single one suggested. The house holds that after a bill becomes a law, then there are no strings on the Executive.

The senate passed yesterday the Wright road bill by a vote of 26 to 19 after a persistent fillibuster by administration senators. The Wright bill originated in the senate and was sent to the house where it was slightly amended. The vote in the senate yesterday was on the amended bill. Many senators evidently felt that they could not longer haggle over details and that they could not longer "stand with Gov. Bilbo" and run the risk of still further provoking the wrath of the people back at home who are clamorous for legislation that will do away with the dust and the loose gravel which makes travel in the state so hazardous to life.

The Governor as gleaned from his message Monday is evidently satisfied with the political situation growing out of the legislative deadlock.

The following is in part what the Governor said:

Notwithstanding, I believe and still believe that the greatest governmental blunder that could be made would be the election of highway commissioners to perform this work because you cannot get the highest class of business men and the type of men who should have charge of this work to engage in a political campaign, yet I was so anxious to save the people's tax money and to pull Mississippi out of the mud and assure her future prosperity and development, that I sacrificed all of my convictions and agreed to call an election to select these three commissioners who have sole and exclusive control of the construction of our hard surfaced highways; such commissioners to be selected for and from each supreme court district, yet to be voted upon by the people of the entire state. I believed that while the elective system is totally bad and wrong, yet if elected by the state at large that only outstanding men could or would be elected.

Present Bill Won't Do.

We now have before us a road bill that provides for three more highway commissioners to be added to the eight, yet all the power of the money is turned over to the present highway commission. The three commissioners suggested in the last bill that passed the house, while they are designated as executive committeemen, will be mere employes of the present eight highway commissioners. The three new men no matter what you call them or how much you pay them, must do the bidding of the present eight commissioners. I don't know whether the senate will pass this bill or not. I hope not. It is worse than no good roads bill at all. I could not consistently and conscientiously sign it. I am not going to sign it.

However, much I may regret to disagree with the legislature, yet I must answer to my own conscience and to the people for my own official acts. When the majority of the house of representatives passed this bill the alleged leaders of the house knew full well that I could not consistently sign this bill and well did they know that I would not. I have reached the conclusion, after these 19 months of effort, that the alleged leaders of the house, referred to as the "Big Four," do not want any road legislation whatsoever. They may think they are fooling the governor and the people, but I am persuaded they are only fooling themselves. I am not making these statements as a fact or as a charge but I am only giving you my conclusions after 19 months of honest and patriotic effort to bring about a solution of this vexing and all-important problem for the welfare of Mississippi. If my conclusions are not righteous in the face of all the facts known to you members of the legislature, you don't have to ask me to apologize, I will apologize now to any one who feels effended.

A Fruitless Effort

During these nineteen months seemingly wasted in a fruitless effort to meet the demand of the people of Mississippi for good roads, which demand is practically unanimous, the tax payers of Mississippi have spent approximately $25,000,000 in building and trying to maintain an imperfect system of highways. A great part of this money has been wasted and the responsibility is on the legislature, because we have refused or neglected to change the system by proper legislation. During this same nineteen months, the automobile owners of the state have suffered a total and irrevocable loss of more than $50,000,000 in damage to their automobiles because of the present bad road system. During these nineteen months scores of our men, women and children have had their lives snuffed out because of our bad and imperfect highways. During these same nineteen months, the people of Mississippi have suffered losses that cannot be estimated because of her lack of growth, her stagnation and her retarded development; especially, along industrial, social, religious, agricultural and educational lines.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 5.—Just before final adjournment of the legislature last night, Gov. Bilbo vetoed the Wright road bill. He also vetoed the bill passed by the house in the early days of the present extraordinary session meeting the requirements of the Federal Aid Road law whereby Mississippi gtts something nearly two million dollars annually for roads. He based his reasons for vetoing the bill meeting the requirements for federal funds for roads upon the grounds that there was no proper road law passed.

From the record it appears that the Governor "dropped his wad" during the last hours of the sitting of the senate. Those said to be his closest friends in the senate did all they could to defeat the Wright road bill, but they failed.

It is a matter of Capital gossip that the "84-big four" in the house and those generally regarded as not being sponsors of the administration, feel that the Governor has placed himself in a hole on road matters. He, it is said, talked and wrote about getting a road law and now that one has been passed, he vetoes it because it does not meet his views. It is said that the Wright bill did not suit either the house or the senate but, like almost all legislation, it was a compromise and many thought it would serve as a starter and that when work was begun, any objectionable features of the law could be remedied.

Gov. Bilbo sent in a special message in the closing hours of the session stating that a recent audit made of the office of secretary of state showed that the late Joe Power was short in his accounts with the state about $56,000. Mr. Power is dead and cannot speak in his own defense. He and his father, Col. J. L. Power, served as secretary of state for nearly thirty years. The Governor also stated that the present Secretary of State, Hon. Walker Wood, drew out some three thousand dollars for certain purposes but when he found that he had erred, the money was returned. It is generally known around Jackson that Secretary of State Wood's office has been audited, at Mr. Wood's request, by one of the Governor's auditors and that he has been given a clean bill of health.

In the meantime matters drag on and Mississippi still flounders.

SEED PRICE RAISED BY BORDEN'S ACTION

Glenwild Owner Bulls Cottonseed Market by Offering $40.00 per Ton—Others Follow Suit by Coming Up to Borden's Offer—Action Performs Distinct Service to Farmers and Others of This Section—New Electrically Operated Gin on Glenwild Plantation Will Gin for Public—Has Ad in This Issue.

Offering a price of $40.00 per ton for cotton seed, John Borden, of Chicago, and owner of Glenwild Plantation located near Grenada, has aroused widespread interest among cotton growers of this locality, in view of the fact that this amount is ten dollars greater than offered by other gins in this immediate section.

As soon as the Borden price for cotton seed was announced, the Grenada Oil Mill raised the price it had been paying from $30 to $40.

The Sentinel knows but little about what buyers "can afford to pay" for cotton seed, however, it is safe to assert that Mr. Borden will not lose any money by what he has done in increasing the price. He is concededly one of the country's great financiers and it may be assumed that he knows well what he is about, and that he is amply prepared to take care of himself even though all the oil mills of the state "buck" him.

In doing what he has done, Mr. Borden has performed a distinct service for the farmers of this section. For example if there are 30,000 bales of cotton raised within a radius of thirty miles of Grenada, Mr. Borden's increase in seed prices will put about $175,000 more into the pockets of the farmers of this same section.

Mr. Borden is himself a local grower of cotton, and he has recently constructed a fully equipped gin at Glenwild Plantation. Mr. Borden states that in addition to using the gin for his own product, he will offer its services for the benefit of the planters hereabout.

Glenwild Plantation, the site of Mr. Borden's new gin, is located six miles south of Grenada, in the center of the cotton growing territory of Grenada county. In its construction Mr. Borden has spared no effort in equipping the gin with the best that can be procured in cotton seed extracting machinery. The gin is electrically operated throughout, and is manned by a force of men highly experienced in the operation of ginning machinery.

The attention of the farmers of the county is called to Mr. Borden's ad on page 4 of this issue.

SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

Grenada closed the baseball season last Thursday by splitting a double header with the fast team from Helena, winning the first game 10 to 1 and losing the second 3 to 0.

Bell was knocked out of the box and relieved in the first game by Yonke but came back in the second game and pitched beautiful ball. Kidd struck out 12 men in the first and was never in danger. The only run off him was a homer by Hicks in the first inning.

In the second game Peeples fanned 11 men while Bell struck out four.

Score:

| First Game: | | R | H | E |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Helena | 100 000 0 | 1 | 4 | 3 |
| Grenada | 021 052 x | 10 | 11 | 2 |

Bell, Yonke and Canderlish; Kidd and Perry.

| Second game: | | R | H | E |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Helena | 000 001 2 | 3 | 5 | 1 |
| Grenada | 000 000 0 | 10 | 11 | 2 |

Bell and Canderlish; Peeples and Berry.

GRENADA SHOWS ITS CIVIC PRIDE.

Are public spirit and civic pride factors in the life of Grenada?

The answer in some measure to this question comes in the progress revealed in The Grenada Sentinel's preparation of its Fair & Progress Edition, soon to be placed before the public. In this matter of civic pride it shows Grenada to be soundly founded, and in the mutual banding together for the general progress of the community, there is indication of that essential, without which no city can go forward—public spirit.

In proportion to its size Grenada possesses great institutions and active industriees. It is the home of enterprising mercantile establishments and highly qualified professional men and women. In ample proportions there are also churches and schools, and amusement facilities which provide both relaxtion and recreation. All these are factors which may be pointed out with civic pride.

There exists also many active civic, business and fraternal bodies, functioning actively in their individual lines and composed of wide-awake men and women ever ready to take up and push to a successful conclusion any move looking to civic betterment and the general welfare of the community. Membership in any of these organizations stands for public spirit. The existence of these bodies of representative citizens speaks highly for Grenada.

It is that public spirit, together with the support given by the business houses and industries of Grenada, which is indicating the pride of our citizens in our own community. It is finding greater expression as each day's work goes forward. They are realizing the value of such a medium as The Fair & Progress Edition for the broadcasting of Grenada's possibilities and desirable qualitiees. They are indicating a most generous public spirit, a desire to work together for the further progress of the community.

THE COUNTRY IS UNDERNOURISHED SPIRITUALLY.

It is not an infrequent thing to see articles in the religious press of the day under the caption something like this: "The church and her critics". In our judgment the headlines are misleading. Only in the rarest instances does one hear criticism, except from some one of the Bob Lyle type, of "the church". In using the term "the church", we have reference to the church established by God against which "the gates of hell shall not prevail". Most of the irreligious, or the loose minded, readily concede that God established a church, and that it is only through and by a sincerely Christian life one can hope to meet God's approval and attain life everlasting.

Criticism of those who are in charge or who direct the affairs of a church are too often confused with what some carelessly term the "enemies of the Christian religion". But, as with almost everything else at the present day, there is more or less confusion in the religious mind and perhaps more general discussion than ever before about what the churches, as constituted, are doing and with what they are attempting to do. This is true in matters of economics and with issues concerned with the conduct of the government. Many reasons have been assigned for this assertion upon the part of the individual or individuals, the chief one being that the rank and file are becoming better informed and are more and more less disposed to accept just what somebody else says. Would that the demand "show me" were always backed by well informed minds—minds that had studied questions themselves and that read something more than the market reports, the scandals and sporting pages of the press. The knowledge of good reading is as often barren in the arrogant minded as the Sahara desert is of vegetation or water.

The country is undernourished, spiritually, yet we are spending millions for churches, for missions and for caring for the ministry where thousands only were spent a decade ago. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are being rolled into the hoppers for education today where a quarter of a century ago we spent only hundreds. Hence it would seem not to be a critical observation to say that we are missing the mark somewhere. It is popular to attend college today, yet we might ask is it common to see a well informed college graduate?

Churches may fail but the Christian religion will never fail. And despite any blunders of church leaders and the apparent bewilderment manifest at times as to what is right and as to what is wrong, the church, as we have it, stands for the best we have, and through the church God speaks to the world. Our Maker expects His followers to think for themselves and to be able to sift the chaff from the wheat of any food which is given them even though it be termed spiritual food. Those in charge of churches are human just as all other mankind, and it is our duty, it is meet and proper, to be just as considerate and charitable with what we may term their faults or shortcomings as we would want them to be with ours, and as our Creator must be with ours if we enter the Pearly Gates.

The hope of something that exists beyond the experience which is called death is a product that the church fosters and holds aloft with the greatest care. What were we taught by those whose voices have been stilled by what is called death? Can we close our ears and shut our eyes to the voices that come from the unknown where loved ones abide? What can be sadder, what can be more overaweing, than to stand by the bedside of those dearer to our hearts than life itself and through our tears see them slipping off into the world beyond, often with the last words on their lips, "Meet me over there; I'll be watching and waiting for you". Then it is that the watchman of the church comes as God's messenger and comforter and puts our hands in the hands of that Watchman and that Comforter who bears our sorrows and who shares our griefs.

The hope held out by our Lord through the church of life after death is manna to the soul. It gives all thinking men and women confidence in the real verities of life. It is the inspiration of noble endeavor; it is the sunshine that pushes away every cloud. And the man who goes seriously, sacredly and wisely about his duties as a proclaimer of the Truth has a work only a little lower than the Angels. He is entitled to be measured by the Golden Rule in all things.

"The church is keeping the hope of humanity vital, rational, and everlasting. She is about the only institution that faces the facts of life, or teaches mankind to do so, whatever those facts may be, with victorious faith in the ultimate triumph of the principles of good.

"It teaches men to hope, to aspire, to dream because it holds that a spiritual principle pervades the Universe.

"Faith in the possibilities of mankind is one of the church's major contributions to the world. Humanity, remiss and erring as it is, is not all bad, or hopelessly bad. If the church teaches man is made in the image of God, there is a residue of goodness in him that responds to discipline under the proper influences, making possible those bonds of mutual confidence that are the basis of the enduring group of life. That Jesus saw good in all men is adequate warrant for the attitude of the church. As long as men believe there is good in their fellows, society may hope that better days await us than we have seen".

The above epitomizes very beautifully the principles and teachings of the Golden Rule and that richness of spirit so sublimely set forth in the Sermon on the Mount.

It would seem to be worse than foolish for men to starve physically while they are surrounded with a great abundance of food that takes care of the inner man. Yet it is even a greater folly for men to grope along undernourished spiritually when there is a such a store house of that food which makes life endure even beyond the confines of this world.

The undernourishment of the physical being grows out of different things. Sometimes it is because of the lack of food; sometimes it is because of an ignorance of the proper diet and sometimes it is because of such a conglomeration of foods that the digestive organs cannot assimilate them.

There is a correct way to induce spiritual nourishment; there is a correct way to practice and foster spiritual nourishment. Certainly it does not consist of a lot of nostrums prepared to meet the aims and worldly aspirations of men.

But when men and women "seek first the kingdom of heaven and His righteousness" and realize that when this is done "all these things will be given", the real problem of living and what to do will be solved. Godly characters, men and women consecrated to the Master's work, are most helpful factors in aiding those seeking the ways of righteousness.

WHY NOT TOBACCO AND CIGARETTES?

Since the legislature before it adjourned did not take up the question of raising revenue, it will be compelled to do so when it next convenes.

The unusually large appropriations made at the session of 1928 which are almost sure to be very nearly duplicated at the 1929 session, make it necessary to increase the taxes on property already on the tax rolls, or to find new sources of revenue.

In our judgment if a pretty stiff tax were placed on tobacco, cigars and cigarettes, a big lump of money would be rolling into the state treasury from these sources. The tax on cigarettes should not be like a gentle tap on the wrist, but should be heavy enough to make every purchaser do a little thinking, a little serious thinking, every time he buys.

Before the World War, and for many years, there was line upon line in the school books, giving unmistakable proof of the damaging effect of persistent cigarette smoking on the human system. The War came and the bars went down because it was felt that the cigarette was a nerve stimulant to our boys on the battle lines. Since the bars went down, but little effort has been made to raise them again. Nevertheless what was true prior to the World War is true today as to cigarettes. Unquestionably, if there is anything which can be done to slow up their use, it should be done. Possibly an increase in the cost would serve a good purpose towards that end.

But it was not this phase of the matter we wished to discuss—it is one of revenue and the sources from which it comes.

Assuredly no one will contend that cigarettes are a necessity. The time is here to make non-necessities heavy revenue producers. The cigar buyer, too, sends his money up in smoke; make it a heavy revenue producer and there will be less smoke.

Possibly the average citizen would be hit in the tax on plug tobacco, but there has hardly ever been a law yet that did not bear more heavily on some set of people or some section of the country than on others. Our government is founded upon the theory of the greatest good to the greatest number. That is democracy.

It is a question now of levying more taxes on necessities or of reaching out and taxing more heavily non-essentials.

From the Los Angeles Times we take the following as to the revenue being collected in Poland on tobacco—tobacco and its products furnish nearly half of the revenue required to operate the government.

"It is thought that the government revenue from tobacco in Poland will this year reach $150,000,000. As the total budget of the country is only about $380,000,000 it will be seen that the country will pull nearly half of its expense money out of the smoke. If governments formed the habit of levying taxes upon all vices the virtuous would presently have no assessments to pay."

BUCKET SHOPS AND SPECULATIONS.

The Saturday Evening Post of August 10, carries an editorial under the caption, "Speculation's Seamy Side". The editorial deals with the New York Stock Exchange and those who lay their money down expecting to pick up much more. In view of the fact that trying the New York Exchange and bucket shop dealings recently assumed a new angle in public discussions, and that the Saturday Evening Post is regarded as always conservative and in no sense a partisan publication, we are reproducing a part of that editorial which should throw some light on the tricks of bucket shops and serve as an eye opener to those who have never dabbled in marginal speculations:

With the "bucket shop" phase of speculation the editorial reads:

"The occasional failure or disappearance of concerns which pretend to be brokers, but were merely cheap swindlers, reveals that thousands of persons, including professional men intrust their savings to strangers without inquiry, caution or even elementary common sense. Moreover it develops that these customers frequently operate on margins so slender that their dealings cannot be considered anything but ordinary betting on the turn of the market, in no way different from any game of chance".

But let's see what further the Saturday Evening Post editorial says along this line:

"The willingness of otherwise intelligent persons to operate in a bucket shop reveals an insensate cupidity that harks back to very primitive and unpleasant passions. Newspapers commonly refer to the customers of absconding swindlers as victims. One wonders why. No customer is a victim who expects to make something out of nothing and then discovers to his cost that the other fellow was smarter than he. 'Sucker' is a far more accurate word."

***********

"But the indifference to the means by which wealth is acquired spells either a dangerous immorality or an equally dangerous ignorance.*There is no law against playing the stock market instead of poker or roulette, but there is serious question whether such sport is good for the country".

LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATIONS.

Among the legislative doings of the past week was the naming of a committee by the house to inquire into the accounts and expenditures of state officials. While no particular officer was named, it is generally understood that the committee was primarily named to inquire into the disposition of certain funds entrusted to Bura Hilbun when he was state supervisor of negro schools. Mr. Hilbun was named by Gov. Bilbo to head the department of agricultural service, a department created since he became Governor.

We know nothing whatever about the truthfulness of the charges against Mr. Hilbun. But we believe a good purpose will be served by looking behind the scenes in several of the state departments. Among other things, The Sentinel has repeatedly suggested that it has seemed to it that there were too many officers running up and down the state, often outside of the state, and paying their traveling expenses out of public funds—too much self-liberality with contingent funds.

Anyway the official who has handled the funds in his charge as the law directs has nothing to worry about because of the inquiries of any committee.

MUST CONTINUE TO EAT DUST.

For the purposes of this editorial we shall not undertake to say "who is to blame", but regardless, the deadlock between Gov. Bilbo and the lower house of the legislature brings no immediate promise of relief as to highways in Mississippi. Travelers are told, because of inaction at Jackson, that they must continue to eat dust, endure the hazards to life because of loose gravel and see the period of service of automobiles and automobile tires cut 25 per cent because of graveled highways. Autoists from all over the country speak disparagingly of our roads, and properly so, and they think of dust, doodlebugs and doolittles when contemplating a trip through our state. In addition to all this, hundreds of thousands of dollars are being wasted on building more death dealing roads.

Five "B's"—Bilbo, books, bricks, bonds and "bull"—deadlocked the legislature.

PAINS Went Away

"I WAS very much run-down in health. I had a dreadful ache across the middle of my back. I had a dull, tired feeling, and I dreaded the thought of having to do my household tasks. I was tired when I got up in the morning. I got no rest from my sleep, and I was sleepy all day long.

"My husband got a bottle of Cardui for me. It was not long before I began to show a decided improvement. My strength began to return and I felt much more like myself. The sleepy spells gradually quit and the pains in my back and sides disappeared.

"Cardui is a splendid tonic for women. I proved it for myself."—Mrs. J. E. Shelley, Box 22, R. F. D. 1, Electra, Texas.

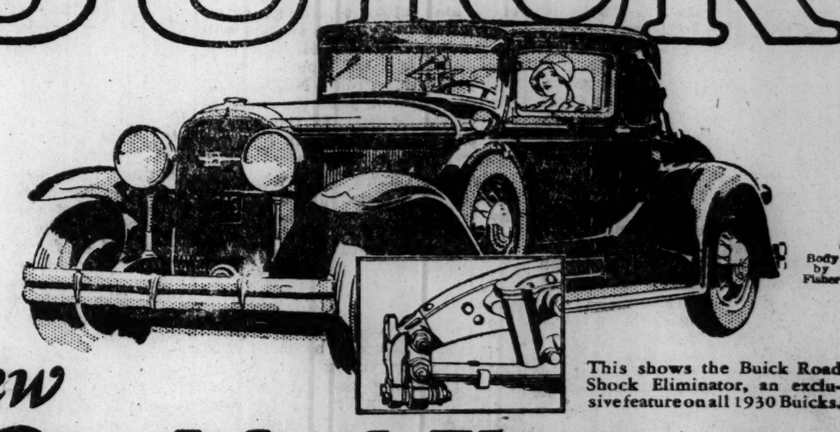
THE New BUICK



Body by Fisher

This shows the Buick Road Shock Eliminator, an exclusive feature on all 1930 Buicks.

New Road shock Eliminator . . and New Steering Gear make Buick the easiest car in the world to drive!

The road shock eliminator—built into the front of the frame on the steering gear side—absorbs every jolt and jar arising from road inequalities, and thus prevents their transmission to the steering wheel and the driver's hands.

Imagine being able to travel the roughest road with your hands resting lightly on the wheel! Think of having an automobile which you can drive all day at any speed without feeling a single road jolt transmitted through the steering wheel!

Such are the fine results of two matchless new quality features in the 1930 Buick—two features which add to this car's appeal as the greatest dollar value of the day: a wonderful new frictionless steering gear, and the new Buick road shock eliminator!

The new Buick steering gear, of the effective worm-and-roller type, moves with incomparable ease throughout its entire turning range, assuring instant, effortless response to the driver's every wish.

Come drive this new Buick. Head for the road you ordinarily avoid as too rough for comfortable travel. Test these twin features of comfort which make the new Buick the easiest steering car in its field!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D.
Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago
(©, 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 8

NEHEMIAH REBUILDING THE WALL OF JERUSALEM

GOLDEN TEXT—The people had a mind to work.
LESSON TEXT—Nehemiah 2:1-7:4.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Working Together.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Working Together.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Teamwork.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operation in Religious Work.

In order to prepare to teach this lesson the teacher should master the contents of the book of Nehemiah.

Nehemiah was a cupbearer to the Persian king. While performing his official duty he learned of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem. The walls of the city were broken down, its gates burnt, and the remnant of the captives were in great affliction. This news brought by his brethren greatly moved Nehemiah. He sat down and wept and mourned several days, fasting and praying before God. In answer to his prayer he was granted a leave of absence from the Persian court, and credentials from the king. He journeyed to Jerusalem and made a survey of the city by night without disclosing his purpose to anyone. Having thus obtained first-hand information, he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem."

I. Preparation for the Building (chap. 3).

The division of labor in this project displayed Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy. Observe some outstanding features of this great work:

1. Stress laid upon indifference (v. 5).

In administrative tasks it is proper that unfaithfulness should be pointed out as a warning to the unfaithful and encouragement to the faithful.

2. Help rendered by the women (v. 12).

Perhaps Shallum had no sons to aid him.

3. Stress laid upon earnestness of some (v. 20).

Recognition of fidelity will spur one to faithfulness.

4. Every one built over again his own house (vv. 10, 23, 28).

No incentive for exertion is quite so strong as that which concerns one's own family.

5. Certain guilds of men undertook certain work (vv. 8, 31, 32).

Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of effort.

II. Hindrances Encountered (4:1-6:14).

1. Scoffing of Sanballat and Tobiah (4:1-6, cf. 2:19, 20).

The oppressors of God's servants frequently begin by hurling ridicule at them, saying that the tread of a prowling fox would break down their stone wall.

2. Conspiracy for a sudden attack (4:7-9).

When the enemy saw that the work was actually succeeding they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic.

3. Conspiracy with the Jews (4:10-23).

They sought to hinder by inducing the Jews who were outside to discourage their brethren by the claim that the task was hopeless and that they were liable to sudden and secret attack.

4. Greed and oppression of the rich (5:1-13).

The Jews of that day, like the profiteers of our day, took advantage of the poor and oppressed them, so that they mortgaged their land and even their daughters into slavery.

5. Scheme to take Nehemiah's life (6:1-14).

When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every other way they sought by craft to get Nehemiah away, that they might kill him.

III. The Wall Completed (6:15-7:4).

So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. We may learn from this:

1. That though God's children are beset by enemies, they should not fear.

2. That when beset by enemies, we should pray (4:9).

Their faith was accompanied by wise precaution.

(a) They set watch (4:9).

(b) Men were permitted to be with their families (4:13), and would thus fight better.

(c) Half worked and half watched, all armed for battle.

(d) They worked with sword in one hand (4:17).

(e) They slept in their clothes in readiness (4:23).

Prayer and faith are not slothful or inactive. Genuine faith is always accompanied by precautionary means.

Dangerous Business

Our stomach and digestive system are lined with membrane which is delicate, sensitive and easily injured. It is dangerous business, then, to use medicines containing harsh drugs, salts or minerals, when we are constipated. In addition to the possibility of injuring the linings of our digestive system, these medicines give only temporary relief and may prove habit forming. The safe way to relieve constipation is with Herbine, the cathartic that is made from herbs, and acts in the way nature intended. You can get Herbine at

ILLINOIS CENTRAL SYSTEM — COURTESY EFFICIENT SERVICE ALWAYS

Making Friends

Nine years ago on this date a message from the president of the Illinois Central System was published as an advertisement in the newspapers on the lines of this system. It was the first of a monthly series in which this statement begins the tenth year. As advertising this monthly series undoubtedly has set a record for continuity and duration.

These monthly discussions of railway subjects are part of the program of the Illinois Central System for making friends. Among the purposes of our railroad in desiring the friendship of the public are these:

To obtain recognition of the fact that good service cannot be performed by impoverished railroads;

To take the mystery out of railroading, thereby removing the inevitable results of suspicion, distrust and misunderstanding;

To give the public facts upon which to base an intelligent attitude toward matters of current interest affecting the railroads;

To work toward co-operation instead of hostility in the settlement of questions involving relations with patrons and governmental agencies;

To arouse an appreciation of the railroads and of sound economic policies that will lessen unjust demands upon them;

To create improved morale among railway employes and thus make for the increased efficiency, economy and courtesy of railway service;

To meet the competition of other railroads and of other means of transportation.

The reception which this program has had from the patrons and friends of the Illinois Central System is highly gratifying. Looking to the future, we pledge our best efforts toward meriting the good will which our railroad so happily enjoys.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

New Chrysler Multi-Range Gear Shift

The new Multi-Range Gear Shift, developed in the Chrysler engineering laboratories at Detroit, is a feature of the recently announced Chrysler "77" and "70". It retains control of the car far more simple, more effective and safer than ever before. Starting Range has a top speed of more than 40 miles an hour. Acceleration Range is a pick-up at all speeds up to 60. A floating Speed range is used for driving. In addition there is a Heavy Duty Range for deep mud, and sand or steep hill climbing. Shifting back and forth between Acceleration and Speed ranges is accomplished without clashing or grinding of gears. Reverse Range is in the conventional position.

A BROTHER OF MAN

Did you give him a lift? He's a brother of man
And bearing about all the burden he can.
Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue,
And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.
Did you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill
And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill.
Did you give him a word? Did you show him the road?
Or did you just let him go on with his load?
Did you help him along? He is human like you.
But the grasp of your hand might have carried him through.

Did you bid him good cheer? Just a word and a smile
We... what he most needed that last weary mile.
Do you know what he bore in that burden of cares
That is every man's load, and that sympathy shares?
Did you try to find out what he needed from you,
Or did you just leave him to battle it through?
Do you know what it means to be losing the fight?
When a lift just in time might set everything right?
Do you know what it means—just the clasp of the hand
When a man's borne about all that a man ought to stand?

"I got so nervous my stomach felt like it was jumping. Vinol entirely relieved the trouble. I feel better than in years."—J. C. Duke.

Vinol is a compound of iron, phosphates, cod liver peptone, etc. The very FIRST bottle makes you sleep better and have a BIG appetite. Nervous, easily tired people are surprised how QUICK the iron, phosphates, etc., give new life and pep. Vinol tastes delicious. Corner Drug Store.

Over a Billion Deadly Germs in a Single Drop of Water

Germs are so small that there may be as many as one billion, seven hundred million of them in a drop of water. And just a few of these tiny germs, if they get into your blood through a cut in your skin, may make you so sick you will be in bed for weeks—may cause the loss of a limb through blood poisoning—may even infect you with that most dreadful and fatal of diseases, lockjaw.

Just because you can see no dirt in a cut does not mean that it is clean. You cannot see germs. The only safe and sane thing to do, is to thoroughly wash every cut, no matter how small, with Liquid Borozone, to kill the germs, and then dust it with Borozone Powder, to hasten the healing. Liquid Borozone costs 30 cents, 60 cents, $1.20 and $1.50; Borozone Powder, 30 cents and 60 cents; and can be had at

When you have guests, it shows them a nice courtesy to have their visits recorded in the local paper. And when you or any of your family are away on a visit it's an easy way to let your friends know about it by letting them read it in the newspaper. This paper is anxious to carry as much local, social and personal news as possible every week and it would greatly appreciate it if its friends would phone or write what news they know to the society editor each week. But be sure to sign your name when sending in items through the mail and please get them in to her before Thursday morning. Thanks!

Benefit Rook Party Success.

The Girl Scouts' benefit rook party on last Friday afternoon was quite a success and was enjoyed by a large number of players. A nice sum was realized. The scouts and the council appreciate very much the cooperation and help which they received. The council is composed of Mrs. John Rundle, Mrs. W. D. Salmon, Mrs. W. H. Kirk, Mrs. Cowles Horton, Mrs. E. C. Thompson, Mrs. J. E. Lufkin, Mrs. A. J. McCaslin, Mrs. Homer Weir and Miss Lizzie Horn. Mrs. R. L. McLeod, Jr., is captain of Troop 1, and Miss Faye Gunn is lieutenant of Troop 2.

Mrs. McCaslin and Mrs. Horton, who had charge of the decorations, had made the lower floor of the Masonic Temple, which was the scene of the affair, lovely with a variety of garden flowers.

After the games the following young ladies assisted in serving delicious cream and cake to the guests: Misses Catherine and Alethea Betz, Adelaide and Grace Cowles Horton, Martha Oliver, Annie Frances Honeycutt, Gloria Williams and Eleanor Lickfold.

Misses Hornor Entertain.

Misses Blanche and Anna Lucile Hornor complimented their guest, Miss Martha Tiley, of Greenwood, with an enjoyable bridge party last Wednesday afternoon.

The games were played on the front porch of the Turnage home on Bell Street. Later the guests were served chocolate sundaes and cake.

Those making up the three tables of players, besides the hostesses and honoree, were: Misses Eloise and Elizabeth Wilkins, Louise and Frances Boushe, Cornelia Mohler, Mary and Catherine Ross, Lucile Stevens and Louise Stokes. Miss Myrtle Cunningham was a tea guest.

Al Fresco Party.

A most delightful al fresco party was given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Hubert Tatum and Mrs. Overton Pearson on the beautiful lawn of Mrs. W. C. McLean's home.

A variety of summer flowers, among them many lovely gift bouquets was used to decorate the porch. Bud vases filled with fragrant rosebuds adorned the card tables.

When the guests had all arrived they were served an appetizing salad and ice course. Miss Sarah Jane Tatum, who was gowned in a dainty pink organdy, and Miss Lucy Webb Sharp, who was dressed in a becoming green organdy, assisted the hostess in serving.

High score was held by Mrs. Frank Mohead. As a reward for her skill she received an attractive box of guest soap cut in the shape of bridge emblems. Consolation prize, a pretty bottle of bath salts, was cut by Mrs. F. A. Stacy.

Those who were privileged to attend were: Mrs. George Grant, Mrs. B. S. Dudley, Mrs. E. A. Penn, Mrs. Edgar Underwood, Mrs. Mollie Townes, Mrs. O. F. Lawrence, Mrs. Ben Brown, Mrs. Robert Sharp, Mrs. A. J. McCaslin, Mrs. F. A. Stacy, Mrs. J. C. Prose, Mrs. Robert Hall, Mrs. Frank Mohead, Mrs. A. R. Dockery, Mrs. Frank Gerard, Mrs. W. C. Page-Horn.

A simple but beautiful home wedding was solemnized in Grenada Friday afternoon, August 30, at 3 o'clock between Miss Thelma Horn, of Grenada, and Mr. Leslie J. Page, of Memphis. The ceremony was said by the Rev. J. H. Holder, pastor of the Methodist Church, in the presence of only members of the bride's family.

The home of the bride's parents, which was the scene of the wedding, was artistically decorated with cut flowers and ferns. In the living room the mantelpiece had been banked with ferns and potted flowers, forming an improvised altar before which the couple plighted their troth. Huge baskets of pink zinnias and clematis were placed on either side and pink tapers in silver candelabra shed a soft glow over all.

The bride, who is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Horn, was dressed in a fall model of navy blue georgette trimmed in transparent velvet with accessories to match. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony the happy couple left for Memphis where the groom holds a responsible position with the National Biscuit Co. They will be at home to their friends at 137 N. Bellevue.

Mrs. Page is one of Grenada's finest young women. Her childhood training has reflected itself in the interest she has taken in Christian activities and in her attitude toward home and all that this sacred word stands for. She possesses a gracious disposition, is charming of manner and is endowed with those attributes so essential in the real wife and helpmeet. She was educated at Grenada College and is accomplished in many ways.

The Sentinel tenders its congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—In the town of Urbino, Italy, when it was under the control of Cesare Borgia, famous military commander as well as great statesman, a certain Messer Corvinus Trismegistus, arrant rogue, is flourishing as a fortune teller, caster of spells, and dispenser of poisons to those who can afford to pay for them. To him comes in great secrecy the Lady Bianca de Fioravanti, beautiful daughter of the rich and powerful lord of the Castle of San Leo, which is holding out against the power of even Cesare Borgia. In the act of entering, the girl is astounded by the appearance of what she takes for an apparition, but who turns out to be human as herself, and enters with her. Bianca asks the sorcerer for an elixir which will compel love and mentions the name of the man she desires to conquer, Lorenzo Castrocaro, condottiero serving under Cesare Borgia. Corvinus, for a large sum of money, gives her a potion, with directions, and the girl departs. When she leaves, the "apparition" appears before Corvinus. He is the much dreaded Cesare himself. Borgia learns from Corvinus that he has a substance which he declares will restore the dead to life. He then accuses the man of spreading the report that the Sultan Djem had been destroyed by the Holy Father through a subtle poison which Corvinus had supplied. Corvinus denies it, but admits he has a deadly poison which will lie dormant in the body for 30 days and at the end of that time result in the death of the person to whom it has been administered. Cesare forces him to drink it, and restore himself to life. The sorcerer secures an emetic and saves himself.

CHAPTER II.—At a council, at which Castrocaro is present, the duke is assured by his officers that the castle of San Leo is practically impregnable and can only be starved out. This will take more time than Cesare is willing to devote to the task. Castrocaro tells the duke he has frequently scaled the mountain on which the castle is situated. With a subtle purpose, and believing Castrocaro is not so insensible to Bianca's beauty as the girl supposes, he sends him to her with a message that her father is sick in San Leo. The young officer returns from the visit asking the duke to allow Bianca to visit her father. Borgia refuses, but secretly gives orders that she is to be allowed permission to pass through the besieging lines if she makes the attempt. He then accepts Castrocaro's aid and makes Castrocaro an offer of the governorship of the place if through his efforts it is taken. Of course, a misstep or capture is certain death, but the young man accepts the offer, lured as much by the spirit of adventure as by the rich reward offered by Borgia if he should succeed.

"You will wait upon me on your return. I may have other commands for you," he said, and so dismissed him.

An hour later came Castrocaro back to the palace library in great haste and some excitement to seek the duke again.

"My lord," he cried, all in trembling eagerness, "I have conveyed the message, and I have returned to crave a boon. Madonna Bianca besought of me in her affliction a written order to pass the lines of Della Volpe, that she might repair to her father."

"And you?" cried the duke sharply, his level brows drawn together by a sudden frown.

The young captain's glance fell away. Obviously he was discouraged and abashed.

"I answered that I had no power to grant such an order, but—but that I would seek it of your highness; that I knew you would not desire to hold a daughter from her father's side at such time."

"You know a deal," said Cesare sourly, "and you promise rashly. Precipitancy in making promises has never yet helped a man to greatness. Bear that in mind."

"But she was in such sore affliction!" cried Messer Lorenzo, protesting.

"Aye!" said the duke dryly. "And she used you so kindly, eyed you so fondly, gave you such sweet wine to drink, that you had no strength to resist her soft appeal."

Cesare, watching his condottiero closely, observed the flicker of the young man's eyelids at the mention of the wine, and was satisfied. But even more fully was he to have the assurance that he sought.

"Have I been spied upon?" quoth Messer Lorenzo hotly.

Cesare shrugged contemptuously, not deigning to reply.

"You have leave to go," he said in curt dismissal.

But Messer Lorenzo was in a daring mood, and slow to obey.

"And the authority for Madonna Bianca to join her father?" he asked.

"There are good reasons why none should enter San Leo at present," was the cold reply. "Since you lay such store by it, I regret the necessity to deny you. But in time of war necessity is inexorable."

Chagrined and downcast, the condottiero bowed and withdrew. Having promised and finding himself now unable to fulfill the promise made to her over that cup of wine which she had brought him with her own fair hand, he dared not present himself to her again. Instead he dispatched a page to her with the unwelcome news of the duke's refusal.

Yet in this matter Cesare Borgia was oddly inconsistent. For scarcely had Castrocaro left his presence than he turned to his white-faced secretary.

"Write me three lines to Della Volpe," said he, "ordering that if Madonna Bianca de' Fioravanti should attempt to steal through his lines and gain San Leo, he is to offer her no hindrance."

Agabito's round, pale countenance reflected his amazement at this order. But Cesare, surveying him, smiled inscrutably for all reply, and, from his knowledge of his master and that smile, Agabito perceived that Cesare was embarked upon one of those tortuous, subtle courses whose goal none could perceive until it had been reached. He bent to his task, and his pen scratched and spluttered briskly. Very soon a messenger bearing the order was on his way to Della Volpe's camp.

That very night Madonna Bianca considerately did what the duke expected of her. She slipped past the Borgia sentinels in the dark, and she was in San Leo by morning, though in Urbino none knew of this but Cesare, who had word of it privately from Della Volpe. Her palace by the Zoccolanti remained open as if inhabited by her, but to all who came to seek her it was said that she was in ill health and kept her chamber. And amongst these was Lorenzo Castrocaro, who, upon being denied admittance on this plea, concluded that she was angry with him for having failed to do as he had promised, and thereafter grew oddly silent and morose.

Two days after her flight came news of Fioravanti's death in the grim fortress he defended, and Castrocaro was dispatched by the duke to Sesena on a mission which might well have been intrusted to a less-important officer. It was ten days later when his immediate return was ordered, and in view of the terms of that order, he went, upon reaching Urbino, all dust-laden as he was, into the duke's presence, with the dispatches that he bore.

Valentinois sat in council at the time, and Della Volpe from the lines under San Leo was in attendance.

"You are very opportunely returned," was his greeting of Messer Lorenzo, and he thrust aside, as of no consequence, the dispatches which the latter brought. "We are met here to consider this resistance of San Leo, which is being conducted now by Tolentino with all the firmness that was Fioravanti's. We must make an end; and you, Messer Lorenzo, are the man to accomplish it."

"I?" cried the young soldier.

"Sit," Cesare bade him, and obediently Castrocaro took a chair at the table. "Listen. You are to understand that I am not commanding you to do this thing, for I command no valued officer of mine so greatly to imperil his life. I but show you what is our need—what might be done by one who has your knowledge and whose heart is stout enough to bid him take the risk which the thing entails."

The condottiero nodded his understanding, his blue eyes set upon the duke's calm face.

"You told us here," Cesare continued, "of a perilous way into San Leo which is known to few, and to yourself amongst those few. You said that if a man were to gain the plateau on the southern side of the rock's summit he might, with a rope and a grappling hook, effect an entrance. Now, if a man were to do this at dead of night, choosing his time wisely so as to take the sentry unawares, stab that sentry, and thereafter reach the gates and loose the bars, the rest would be an easy task. Della Volpe's troops would, meanwhile, have crept up by the bridle path to await the signal, upon which they would pour forth against the unbarred gate, and so San Leo might be reduced at last with little loss of life."

Messer Lorenzo considered for some moments, the duke watching him.

"It is shrewd," he said, approvingly. "It is shrewd and likely to succeed, provided the man who goes is one who knows the rock and the fortress itself."

"Provided that, of course," said Cesare; and he looked steadily at the young man.

Messer Lorenzo bore that look a moment with the self-possession that was natural to him. Then, translating its quiet significance:

"I will go," he said quietly, "and heaven helping me, I will succeed."

"You have counted the cost of failure?" said Cesare.

"It needs no counting. It is plain enough. A rope and a beam from the castle wall, or a leap from the rock itself."

"Then, since who gambles should know not only what he may chance to lose, but also the stake he stands to win," said the duke, "let me say that if you succeed I'll give you the governorship of the fortress with a stipend of ten thousand ducats."

Messer Lorenzo flushed in his agreeable surprise. His eyes sparkled and his tone rang with youth's ready confidence in its own powers.

"I will not fail," he promised. "When do I make the attempt?"

"Tomorrow night, since you have resolved. See that you rest betwixt this and then to fit you for the fatigue of such an enterprise. And so, sirs, let us hope that we have at last a solution to this riddle of San Leo."

CHAPTER III

YOU see, I hope, what Messer Castrocaro did not yet see, nor for that matter ever saw—knowing nothing of what had happened on the night when the duke visited Messer Corvinus Trismegistus. You see in the duke's choice of him for this enterprise an instance of that fine discrimination with which Cesare picked his instruments.

Macchiavelli, who studied the duke at close quarters, and who worshiped him as the very embodiment of all the virtues of princeship, was no doubt inspired by the duke's unerring wisdom in the choice of ministers to devote to the subject a chapter of his "The Prince."

"The first conjecture made of a prince and of his intellectual capacity," he writes, "should be based upon a consideration of the men by whom he surrounds himself, and when these are faithful to him, and sufficient for his occasions, he is to be accounted a wise prince, for having chosen them sufficient and kept them faithful."

Macchiavelli writes thus no more than Cesare might himself have written, had he theorized upon princeship instead of practicing it. Indeed, it is upon Cesare Borgia's practices—as Macchiavelli half admits in one place—that the Florentine founded his theories. So that it is hardly an over-statement to say that whilst Macchiavelli wrote "The Prince," Cesare Borgia was its real author, since his were the conceptions and actions that Macchiavelli converted into precepts.

You see him here selecting for this task one who, although the youngest among his captains, was yet undoubtedly the most sufficient for his particular need. And observe the quality of his sufficiency. In a measure it was adventitious, depending upon Castrocaro's chance acquaintance with that back way up the rock of San Leo. But in a still greater measure it was the result of Cesare's clever manipulation of circumstances.

If that is not yet quite clear to you, it shall become abundantly so ere all is told. But do not fall into the error of supposing that anything that befell was the result of chance. From now onward all happens precisely as Cesare had designed. He had discovered certain forces, and he had harnessed them to his needs, setting them upon a course by him predetermined and marked out.

He realized that chance might disturb their career, and fling them out of that course, but he did not depend upon chance to bear them to the goal at which he aimed them.

On the afternoon of the following day, thoroughly rested and refreshed, Messer Lorenzo Castrocaro rode out of Urbino with a bodyguard of a half-dozen of his men-at-arms and took the road to Della Volpe's camp under San Leo. He arrived there without mishap toward nightfall, and having supped with the commander of the beleaguers in the latter's tent, he thereafter completed his preparations. Toward the third hour of night he set out alone upon his perilous undertaking.

To lessen the risk of being perceived by any watcher in the castle, he had dressed himself entirely in black, taking the precaution to put on under his doublet a shirt of mail, which whilst being dagger-proof, was yet so finely wrought that your two cupped hands might contain it. He was armed with sword and dagger, and bandolier-wise across his body was coiled a rope, to which he had attached a strong, double-pronged grappling-hook very broad in the bend, all swathed in straw. This had been carefully and firmly adjusted upon his back, so that it should not hamper his movements.

With Della Volpe he had concerted that the latter, at the head of fifty men, should quietly approach the fortress by the bridle-path, and, having gained the summit, lie concealed until the gate should be opened by Castrocaro himself. Then they were instantly to spring forward, and so effect an entrance.

It was a fine clear night of summer, and a full moon rode in the heavens, rendering the landscape visible for miles. This was well for the earlier part of Messer Lorenzo's climb; and before midnight, by when he hoped to reach the summit, that moon would have set, and darkness would lend him cover.

Alone, then, he set out, and made his way round to the southern side of the great precipitous hill on the crest of which, like the capital of a column, the bulk and towers of the fortress showed gray in the white moonlight.

At first the ascent was easy, and he was able to go forward swiftly; soon, however, the precipice grew more abrupt, the foothold became scantier, and in places failed almost entirely, so that his progress was retarded and for his life's sake he was compelled to move with infinite caution, husbanding his strength against the still more strenuous labor that lay before him.

Hesitation or doubt he had none. It was a good ten years since last, in boyhood, he had scaled those heights; but boyhood's memories are tenacious, and he was as confident of his way as if he had trodden it but yesterday. Every little projection of that cliff, every fissure that afforded foothold, every gap to be overcome, he knew before he reached it.

At the end of an hour he had not accomplished more than a third of the ascent, and the most difficult part of it was yet to come. He sat down upon a grassy ledge, unusually spacious, and there he rested him awhile and recovered breath.

Thence he viewed the Emilian plain, revealed for miles in the moon's white light, the glittering, silvery spread of sea away in the distance to the east, the glimmering snow-capped peaks of the Apennines to westward. Above him towered the gray cliff, abrupt and sheer as the very walls of the fortress that crowned its summit, a climb that well might have appalled the hardiest mountaineer, that might, indeed, have baffled even a goat. Surveying it with his calm blue eyes, Messer Lorenzo realized that the worst danger he had to face that night was the danger of this climb. By comparison, the rest—the scaling of the castle wall, the poniarding of a sentry or two, and the opening of the gate—were safe and simple matters. Here, however, a false step, a misgiving even, or a moment of giddiness, such as might well beset him, must plunge him down to instant death.

He rose, inhaled the fragrance of the summer night, breathed a short prayer to his patron saint, the Holy Lawrence, and pushed on. Clinging with hands and feet and knees to the face of the cliff, he edged along a narrow strip of rock, for some few yards, to another ledge; there he paused to breathe again, thankful that so much was accomplished.

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan

Five-Passenger 2-Door Sedan

Body by Fisher

Without a single exception, today's Pontiac Big Six is the fastest, most powerful six of its price offered to the motoring public today. Its sturdy, 200 cubic inch, L-head engine develops 60 brake horsepower at the moderate engine speed of 3000 r. p. m. Its top speed is the highest to be found in any low-priced six, according to the "fifth wheel"—most accurate speed measuring device known to automotive engineers. The same instrument proves it to be the fastest accelerating six in its entire price group. Unquestionably, today's Pontiac Big Six is the performance leader of its field—

With these qualities in addition, to assure you greater value

Greater STYLE

Specially designed bodies by Fisher with the exclusive concave belt moulding. A variety of the season's smartest color combinations in lustrous, long-wearing Duco. A distinctive radiator design. Flaring fenders, 70 inches across. All bright metal finished in gleaming, stainless chrome plate.

Greater CONVENIENCE

Driver's seat adjustable as you drive. Easily regulated VV-type windshield. Foot-controlled headlights. Cross-flow radiator with automatic temperature control—no hand operated shutters to bother with. Coincidental lock—one turn of the key locks both ignition and transmission.

Greater LONG LIFE

Assured by such features as Pontiac's full pressure lubricating system which supplies the engine with correct lubrication for any speed—the crankcase ventilating system—special moulded non-squeak brake linings which often operate for more than 30,000 miles without replacement—sturdy hardwood and steel body construction—and dozens of others of equal importance.

Greater ECONOMY

Proved by the records of a large public utilities corporation, which operated 996 automobiles of 33 different makes during 1928. Pontiac actually costs one cent less per mile to operate than any other low-priced six.

If you are interested in a car costing anywhere near Pontiac's price, your own interests demand that you see and drive today's Pontiac Big Six. And when you come in, bring your present car for our appraisal. Its value will probably cover the down payment, leaving only a few dollars per month to pay. And, as you pay, you will be enjoying the finest car of its price the market affords.

WRITES ON BISHOPS' PAY

Presiding Elder Corinth District Makes Public Statement.

Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder of the Corinth district and one of the leading ministers of the Methodist church, has given the following communication to the press touching the salaries and allowances made to bishops of the Methodist church. Mr. Felts' statement appears in the current issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. What he says follows:

That our bishops should be well paid goes without saying. We want them to be free from all unnecessary financial worry that they may the better serve the whole church. Their positions of honor carry a measure of responsibility found nowhere else in the church. College professors and presidents, even pastors and presiding elders, occupy wholly different positions, carry wholly different responsibilities.

Recently there appeared in the press a statement to the effect that the salary paid these honored servants of the church was insufficient. It was even suggested that this insufficiency might properly be supplemented by activity in the business world. On the presumption that water takes on color from the deposit of leaves, and the like presumption that even a super-man cannot make forays in the business world without being materially and definitely affected thereby, I sharply challenge the wisdom of such a course. The remedy, if remedy is needed, is an increase in salary.

As it appears to me, when a man is elected to the episcopacy he has two lines of procedure equally honorable and praiseworthy. He may decline to accept. More than one man has for satisfactory reasons so acted without the slightest stigma being attached thereto. He may accept, and conform to all the implied conditions attached to this high office by time and interpretation.

The salary of a bishop at present is $6,000, plus traveling expenses, and $1,800 for a secretary. The Committee on Episcopacy at the General Conference estimates the salary, reports to the Commission on Budget, and the estimate made is apportioned to the various Annual Conferences for collection. Sufficient assessment is made to guarantee the full payment. The publishing agents are instructed to pay the salary monthly.

It is not amiss to say that every time a bishop holds a district conference, dedicates a church, delivers a commencement sermon or address, holds a series of meetings, or does any kind of special work in his own or another's territory, he receives an honorarium. It is seldom less than $50. It is often much more. Nor am I objecting to this time-honored custom. It is proper and right.

Now look at the facts. A bishop's salary in our church is $6,000 per annum. His necessary traveling expenses are provided for. He is furnished a secretary. He often receives an honorarium. He is paid whether the pastor is paid or not. He is paid whether the benevolences are paid or not. He is honored as no man among us. His power is so nearly absolute that there is a growing sentiment in favor of some radical changes. If he is anything other than a man of one work, and that definitely spiritual, there is complaint—just complaint. The spiritual life must be dominant, all the time dominant, all-where dominant, if he is to be an asset to the church. Short of this he is a liability.

If by any process of reasoning any man among us elected to this high office finds himself unwilling or unable to live on the stipend provided; unwilling or unable to strive to live up to the standards expected of such a man, this expectation being based on the life and work of his predecessors, to say nothing of those now serving us, let him do the honorable thing—resign his office and give his time and energy to the thing or things which appeal to him with finality.

Might it not be well for the next General Conference to reinterpret the vows of a bishop, or enact special legislation defining the leeway belonging to the office in such a way as to meet the approval and understanding of the whole church? As matters now stand we have bickering and strife and heart-burning and contrary interpretations and confusions multiplied that augur no good for the days to come.

BIG EVENTS FOR YOUNG AMERICA

Boys and Girls Will Put On Exhibits, Contests, Demonstrations

Young America will play an important part at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis, Sept. 28-Oct. 5. The boys and girls will demonstrate their skill as farmers, stock raisers and homemakers in a series of exhibits, demonstrations, judging contests and special events.

Monday, Sept. 30, will be 4-H Club Boys and Girls Day with judging contests for poultry, dairy cattle and live stock. Contests in the girls' department will include clothing, food preservation and nutrition.

The first All-South 4-H Club Congress will be held during the Fair with every Southern state represented by picked teams of boys and girls. Arrangements have been made for the boys to camp on the Fair Grounds. The girls will be entertained at one of the leading down town hotels.

Friday, Oct. 4, will be Vocational Agricultural Students Day with milk judging contests and poultry culling contests. The Smith-Hughes students of Vocational Home Economics plan interesting contests and features stressing greater uses of cotton.

The annual Southern Students Dairy Cattle Judging Contest will be held Monday, Sept. 30, under the same rules used by the National Dairy Show.

School boys and girls from the Tri-States and from other sections will be contenders for many of the specials offered in the Pigeon Show.

In connection with the 4-H Club Congress the Agricultural Extension Forces of the South will put on special exhibits featuring all phrases of Boys and Girls Club work. The U. S. Department of Agriculture will send to Memphis an exhibit "Acres of Diamonds," national in scope and featuring the importance of 4-H work.

Among the visitors in Memphis for the Mid-South Fair will be a German homing Pigeon captured by American soldiers in the Argonne during the World War. The little bird wears a leg band with the imperial crown of Germany on it.

10 YEARS AGO IN GRENADA

From the Files of THE GRENADA SENTINEL

Mr. John L. Milner left the middle of the week for Little Rock, Ark.

Rev. R. A. Tucker, pastor of the Methodist church, is assisting his brother at Millington, Tenn., in a meeting. Rev. T. M. Brownlee will fill the pulpit at the Methodist church next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Guntharp stopped over in Grenada several days ago and were the guests of Mrs. W. W. Garner on their return from an extended trip to points in the east and Canada. After only one day, Mr. Guntharp went on to McComb City but Mrs. Guntharp remained over to spend some days with her sister, Mrs. Garner.

Mrs. E. M. Sherwood, wife of Grenada's very popular and efficient depot agent, is visiting relatives at Evansville, Ind.

Miss Margaret Moody returned several days ago from a visit to the Mississippi coast.

Mr. Ben McElwrath will be associated with Mr. Barwick in business and is deservedly regarded as one of Grenada's best and most worthy young men.

Mr. Van M. Rhodes was present at the Russell rally in Jackson last week and expresses himself as being highly pleased with everything that was said and done on that occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. White are at home again. They only a few days ago returned from a trip which carried them to Washington City and points in Canada. Mrs. White will be ready for her school duties Monday.

Miss Estelle Rippy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Rippy in Grenada expects to leave Saturday for Birmingham where she will teach this fall. Miss Rippy is a graduate of the I. I. & C. at Columbus.

Master William Dubard returned last Saturday from Granger, Texas, where he had been for several weeks the guests of his mother's mother, and other relatives. He was accompanied by his uncle, Mr. C. C. Young.

Mr. Homer J. Williams and wife and little baby spent several days last week with Mr. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Van W. Williams in Grenada. From here they went to Jackson to visit Mrs. William's relatives. Mr. Williams is in the employ of the U. S. Land office and has been on his assignment for the past year in New Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor have returned much to the delight of their many friends. Mr. Taylor will be in charge of the cotton office of Threefoot Bros., again in Grenada and will have associated with him Mr. Jim Horn.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Adams, of Greenwood, motored over Sunday and were guests of Mr. A. D. Turnage and family.

Miss Esther Broadstreet announces that she will resume her music class at the opening of the public schools Monday.

Mrs. E. R. Proudfit returned several days ago from a visit to her parents and other relatives in Sardis. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Duval accompanied her home.

Column About Colored People of Grenada County

Items by J. H. Phillips

Last Sunday afternoon the 7th anniversary of the Colored Relief Association was held at the public school building. A program for the occasion had been previously arranged. A brief history of its organization by J. H. Phillips, Mr. E. D. Brooks spoke of the inmates and its management. Mr. D. L. Brown discussed its progress and achievements; Dr. Farr, pastor of the First Baptist church, addressed the audience on the subject of faith. His address was plain, practical and was well received. Mrs. W. E. Smith reported that more than $7,000.00 had been collected and spent for the benefit of the Old Folks Home. Twenty-one old people have partaken of this splendid charity work. Eight of these old people have died and have received a Christian burial which perhaps would not have been the case if the association did not exist. These conditions could not have obtained except for the vision and help of our white friends to whom we are very grateful. The contribution on this anniversary day was $53.40. As the months and days go by we are hoping that all of our people will be awakened to the appreciation and support of this great institution. This being annual election time, a motion prevailed to continue the present incumbents for the ensuing year.

Mr. A. Henderson attended the district conference at Oxberry last week. He presented the cause of the Old Folks Home to the ministers and friends and got a contribution of $12.00 which was brought in and added to the funds used for the upkeep of old friends.

Prof. A. M. Rogers and wife have been playing high life all the past week. Last Thursday they attended district conference at Oxberry and on Friday hiked it out for Coldwater, Miss. These outings come in Q. K. for them. A little change in air and scenery helps very much when it is remembered that they will not have such opportunities for several months. They must quit that business and get down to school work which begins Monday morning.

Mr. Jeff Blank left Monday evening for Kansas City where he spends his vacation and at the same time will attend the Baptist National Association which is in session in that city. Mr. Blank is one of our most outstanding citizens. We bespeak for him a good time.

Oxberry News

The Sunday School and A. C. E. League convention of the Grenada district convened at Mt. Zion church Aug. 28th, Rev. Wm. Barnes, P. E., presiding, Prof. L. D. Ash, sec., Mrs. Lola Goss, asst. sec. After perfecting an organization the business of the convention was rapidly dispensed with. Among the visitors of the conference were Bishop W. D. Johnson, W. T. Strong, P. E. of Clarksdale, Miss., Durden and Dr. Solmon Hood, president of Campbell College, Jackson, Miss. and others. The pastors of the different charges rendered a splendid report. It appeared that the spiritual side of the convention was at its highest degree as well as the financial side. The amount of $100.15 was reported.

The cause for the Old Folks Home was presented by Mr. A. H. Henderson and a handsome sum of $12.00 was collected and given to him to help support the aged inmates of our group.

Thus we render the greatest service to God, when we serve humanity.

Dear Sir:

I want to congratulate you upon connecting yourself with this wonderful water.

Years ago this water made a permanent cure of a bad case of Diabetes for me. I had tried in vain several other treatments. I have since recommended this water to several other friends suffering from same trouble and in each case it was a success.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) W. T. Pate

Parking Tower Saves Ground Space

This may be a picture of your future garage. While it occupies the ground space of only a two car garage, this tower serves as a parking space for ten automobiles. The tower is a reinforced concrete shell within which are ten platforms that move up and down on an endless chain in such a way that two platforms are always at the ground level. The platforms are operated on the same principal as a self-operating elevator.
Upper left—The exterior of the original tower garage which has been built at Sandusky, Ohio. Upper right—A mechanical model showing the way in which the platforms operate. Lower—Plymouth car on one of the platforms.

Advertising You Pay For And Don't Use---

Supplementary to newspaper publicity there's a latent advertising power in every letter you mail and every package you wrap and deliver from your establishment.

It costs no more postage to enclose a circular with the one or two page letter that goes from your office to a customer or prospect. And it costs no more in delivery expense to enclose a printed booklet or prospectus of your business in every shipping or delivery package that you send out.

A two cent stamp carries an ounce of first class matter. If your letter weighs a half ounce you pay the freight on another half ounce of advertising matter that should be enclosed.

Your customers will appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending them an additional suggestion or an order blank which they might use to order more of your goods.
